In the morning, students will hear from public figures. In the afternoon, students will travel to institutions (such as government agencies, media organizations, embassies, and think tanks) around Washington to attend briefings. Faculty will guide students’ discussions of their experiences. Students may receive 3 hours of academic credit from UNC Charlotte.

The application deadline for January’s one-week Inside Washington seminar is Wednesday, Friday, October 24. Application materials include statement of interest, resume, and a transcript.

Please note that the seminar overlaps with the start of spring semester UNC Charlotte classes, so you would to make arrangement to make up assignments from these classes. UNC Charlotte’s Washington Center Liaison, Dr. Eric Heberlig (esheberl@charlotte.edu), can provide a letter for you to give to faculty to document that this is a university-approved academic activity.

The cost is $2,295 but scholarships are available for UNC Charlotte students from the state of NC that should defray all or most of the tuition and housing costs. Seminar participants will stay in TWC’s apartment complex in DC for the seminar. Students will still need to pay for travel to DC, food, and amenities while they are in DC.
