

Call out

I currently have several on-going collaborations and collaborative requests that create more demand for my lab than available resources can meet. As such, I am open to forming co-advising scenarios where Ph.D. students and postdocs from other labs use methods and software developed in my lab in collaborative research projects. I can host visitors to train them on our methods, and they can have access to computing resources in collaborative projects. Please contact me if a collaborative project is something of interest to you. See my research summary for on-going projects.